The demoscene has its roots in the home computer revolution of the early 1980s and the subsequent advent of software hacking. The hackers changed the code of the video. Computer games in those years were exclusively text-based, and games with a real-time interface, apart from Space Rangers, appeared only in the mid-90s. At the same time, there were not so many truly popular games of that period. By and large, these were games for the ZX Spectrum, Commodore 64 and Amstrad CPC, that is, for home computers with low capabilities. Space Rangers is the first example of a game that uses a 3D engine.
