- The seamless integration of Exploration, Puzzle, Platforming and 3D Action within a single game. - Multiple players in a local network and online. - FPS 3D Weapon and Item based gameplay. - Smooth and Challenging Single and Multiplayer gameplay. - Voice controlled with the Kinect. - Interstitial Story Line is full of character and will be continually expanding with time. - Captivating Visuals A: I think the direction you are going in, as a platformer, is a mistake. A platformer by nature is a genre for discovering and learning to control a character. Not for shooting things. And especially not a first person shooter. It's supposed to return a bunch of data (20+ rows) based on a few parameters (all in a SqlDataReader). I'm using Dapper for this. I've read the Readers and SqlMappers documentation, but I'm at a loss on how to implement this with the Dapper. No examples/code are provided. Any help is appreciated. Edit: I have tried using Dapper.Query, but now I'm a bit stuck. I'm getting the following exception: `MySql.Data.MySqlClient.MySqlException: Incorrect number of arguments for PROCEDURE mySchema.myFunction; expected 3, got 0.` A: It looks like you are making the assumption that you should be able to use a parameterized SQL statement in Dapper without using a generic SqlMapper. That's probably not the case. The SqlMapper has built-in support for generic parameterized SqlStatements. You should use it to map a parameterized SQL statement to an Entity - or even a DataTable. It's actually quite simple. You will want to use `Dapper.SqlMapper.ExecuteFunction`, so you can map the SQL statement to an Entity or DataTable // build a SqlParameter `SqlParameter param = new SqlParameter(); param.TypeName = "int"; param.SqlDbType = System.Data.SqlDbType.Int; param.Value = 1;`

The man is right, Hillary would have been fucking terrible at her job. As a woman, I disagree with everything that man said about her. Both the man's first and last comments illustrated that he didn't really understand the big issues in the campaign. But in terms of how bad Clinton would've been as a president, the man's remarks were spot on. Hillary would have surrounded herself with the worst and craziest political operatives available. She would have wanted direct communication with the media (who she doesn't trust) and governed only in response to the bizarre ideas that them. Despite the gap in their ideology and the fact that he has no real chance of running and that HRC is going to be the Democratic nominee, I like that he calls her out on the bigotry she espouses. When Michelle Obama took on Berniel about a bullshit business where he was in favor of the death penalty for men, she actually seemed to hum

- Single-player - is a real shooter (first-person). You play as a soldier of the Soviet army. You receive orders to destroy the enemy with the help of your weapons. Use a flamethrower (self-destruct, delay of the main fuse), throw grenades and decoys, and shoot enemy members from distances. It is not just the enemy that is dangerous; you have to look out for your own soldiers too, and get in their way. - Multi-player - Take the role of the commander. It is your job to lead the team in battle. The goal is simple - take control of all the territory and destroy your opponent. What's new in Abasralsa:

3 There are six DLC characters in this set, three from Sonic series: Shadow: Shadow had his own games. Sonic hasn't experienced Shadow at all, however In Shadow's Master Emerald reveals that he is the biological grandson of Tails.[5] Shadow Wounds: With 3 Master Emeralds, 2 Master Balls[5] and one Shadow Dagger. Shadow can know the SuspenShot, which seild Heavy damage, while being able to deflect the slow sonic shock with Steel Tail which reduces Sonic's Speed by 30%.[2] This ability comes with a short stun, which can be interrupted by Sonic's fastest dash or by deflecting any Sonic attack. Shadow uses Pearl Cheese as a power-up. Shadow requires a hard drive, but one can be downloaded at his shop for 300 Points.[6] Background Shadow is the 16 year old grandson of Tails, and is a graduate of Art College. He is also separated from his family, and lives with his Grandfather. Prior to Shadow doing magic and becoming a Shadow, he had not played Sonic the Hedgehog.[5] Along with Metal Sonic, Shadow was the one of only two characters from the series to be shown physically at E3.[7] This was mainly due to Metal Sonic not being used in the game development until 20 minutes before the event, so the remaining characters had not been designed yet; thus forming a unique look and giving design trials to Shadow.[8] Shadow has a PhD in Magic Arts, and creates his own unique spells, combining different elements in a weird way, such as Fire + Light + Ice to form Brawn. His spells are also what lets him control the Master Emeralds, and makes him the only character besides Master Emerald who can control them. He is very interested in sorcery and also in the "Strange World". Being a Shadow, he has very nocturnal features. He sports a V-shaped scar on his forehead, which was the mark that he got after Sonic The Hedgehog captured him,[9] and is named Shadow the Hedgehog. On the Transistor -Shadow's world
