VPN on an Airport without a VPN Client or CalMAN. net 27 â€” Å User:..You're being watched Mitch McConnell and the new legislation he is introducing: Back in the day, the banking industry was more of a community of people, who often trusted each other and relied on one another. A bank's whole business was built on sound judgment and trust. Today, commercial banks are for-profit companies with only one thing on their minds - money. And under these new regulatory burdens, they're not about to trust their customers. The banks will fight to make sure you and I don't trust our financial institutions by imposing all sorts of onerous regulations to keep us safe and to make sure that they can't screw us over. So what do we need to do? We need to step back and reverse the damage. There is a better way to make sure we maintain these community banks as well as we need, rather than walling them off so that they can't offer the services they once did. A better way is to reform the financial rules that allow these banks to do what they did, and prevent this from happening again. And that is just what we will be doing in the months and years ahead. On this Independence Day, let's celebrate these living and breathing, beautiful examples of how good American businesses can flourish and improve the lives of their customers when this government is taken out of their hands. And let's also celebrate what would happen if we got the government out of their hands. Because that's the thing that most concerns me about our economic future. If you remember nothing else, remember that. Most of the country has a much better deal than do folks in Washington, DC, and a government in charge of the banking system is way, way out of line for the rest of the country. Bailing out the financial industry is just another form of bailing out the government. They are exactly the same. We should demand that our government get back out of the banking business. It won't happen in a day. But it must happen. It's the best thing for the nation,
